

DIVINE NAMES IN OLD BABYLONIAN LETTERS

Guido M. Urciuoli

In this paper an index of gods' name occurrences in the letters published in "Altbabylonische Briefe", vol. 1-13, is reported. Wherever it is possible, gods' names are given according to the Sumerian reading of the signs. ^dšamaš, i.e., is reported as ^dutu. Orthographic variants of a name are listed in the same item with one or more character "*" put aside. The occurrences of be-el, bel-le-et and other terms pointing general divinities are not reported, unless they are followed by names (usually in genitive) that make them more specific, like be-le-et ma-tim, be-el ša-ar-bi etc. The same is true for the sign "dingir", in the cases it does not point the god AN. The occurrences of gods' names followed by city names are quoted in separated items. ^dinanna, ^dinanna la-ga-bi-tum and ^dinanna zabalam^k are hence three different items in the list. Occurrences of gods' names followed by general apposition (for examples ^dutu be-li) do not represent separate items. This is also true for apposition relating gods to places, like dingir a-li-ka or il a-li-šu, but in these cases the apposition are reported, inside brackets, just after the mention of the occurrence. It is impossible sometimes to understand which god the text refers to, because the relative signs on the tablet are badly conserved or because they are not still decoded. These occurrences are listed in the last five items of the index. In order to follow as much as possible the transliteration of the author, we have distinguished between ^dx, ^dx [], ^dx x [], ^d[] and ^d[] x; where x stands for a not decodable sign and [] for a part of the text destroyed.

For each god, we distinguish, in sub-items, the occurrences where his name appears as characterizing professions (for example sanga N where N stands for the god in question), tools (e.g. gi tukul N), measure units (e.g. giš bán), illness (qá-ti N), signs (it-tum), cattle (gu₄.apin.hi.a) and anything else can be connected with cult or temple business. We also distinguish the occurrences of god names in the expression ìr N (servant of a god). Gods' name occurrences are however never listed when they are part of a personal or geographic name. Among the occurrences in which gods' names appear on their own, a further separation is performed in order to tell blessing formulas apart. Blessing formulas, listed in the sub-items BF, are usually sentences in which a particular action is desired to be performed for someone's benefit. They are usually, but not always, found at the beginning of a letter. A god's name occurrence in a blessing formulas is listed in a sub-item BF only when he (or a tool/feature of his) is the subject of the desired action. All the other occurrences that cannot be listed in one of the sub-items quoted above are listed immediately in the line following the god's name. In very deteriorated texts it was sometimes quite difficult to understand if a god's name was a part of a personal/ geographical name or pointed instead a divinity. In these cases it was decided:

1) not to quote the occurrence, if it was shown, either in transliteration or in translation, that the author believed it to be a part of a personal name;

2) to list it followed by the remark: (GN or PN?, that is: god name or personal name?) vice-versa. The occurrence of a god's name is not reported in this index when it is only guessed in the notes and not given neither in the transliteration nor in the translation of the letter.

The occurrences are listed in the format: N₁, N₂, N₃; N₂, N₃; ... where N₁ (bolded) is the number of the volume and refers to all the following occurrences in the list up to the next volume number; N₂ is the number of the letter and N₃ is the number of the line in which the god's name appear. If, in a letter, a god's name appears in more than one line, the numbers of these lines will be listed separated each other by a dot; e.g. the number sequence: 32, 5. 7; means that the god's mentions appear in the line no. 5 and in the line no. 7 of the letter no. 32. The signs o. (obverse), r. (reverse), l. e. (left edge) and r. e. (right edge) preceding sometimes a line number are used when a god's name occurs in lines that share the same number with other preceding lines in the same letter. They are never used, on the other hand, when the line in question is the first of the lines with the same number. The signs t., e. and s. point out that the line number they precede refers to the text, to the envelope or to the seal impression respectively.
